

Scott Stirling

2021 Board Candidate Bio

Scott Stirling is a licensed California general contractor, and a certified Green Builder who has operated his small business (Stirling Builders) in Plumas County for over twenty years. He has employed a wide variety of local carpenters, bookkeepers, and managed multiple subcontractors during this time.

He has resided in Plumas county for 36 years, moving here in 1986 to attend Feather River College where he graduated with his A.S in Forestry and garnered building skills through the Construction Technology Program. While at FRC he met and married his wife Suzanne, and purchased three acres of land in Meadow Valley.

Residing in Meadow Valley for 30 years, Scott and Suzanne built an active solar home using as much reclaimed material as possible, and sourced wood locally off their property. Following their daughter Trinity's interest in raising chickens for 4-H, Scott then began to pursue his dream of raising heritage livestock including locally purchased steer, heritage pigs, poultry and bees.

As QNF member for 30 plus years, and a small business owner in Quincy for 20 years,

Scott would be an asset to the QNF board of directors due to his management skills, his belief in sustainable agriculture, and the sustainability of small town economies. Co-Op issues that are of particular interest to Scott are supporting local farmers, looking more closely at food miles, and working to minimize waste packaging in single-use products.

In his off time Scott can be found recreating on the Plumas National Forest: Hiking, biking, skiing, fishing, sailing, hunting and volunteering for the Friends of Plumas Wilderness.
